

Jake is walking around town, looking for interesting things to do and he notices how many differences there are in town. "It's not like last year." He thought people were already decorating for valentines day, which he thought was weird but he noticed that Sam and Pam seem to be a little bit happier, there talking and laughing instead of arguing like normal. Also he noticed there were people building snowmen even though there is almost no snow. He noticed one last thing, there are no stray animals in the park, normally there everywhere. Jake goes home and writes what he noticed in his journal.